Superb Acting Triumphs Over Technical Problems

By Dick Bakkerud

A performance plagued with technical difficulties was saved by the delightful performances of an outstanding supporting cast as the Omaha University Theater opened its 1960-61 season Thursday night, November 17, with Paul Osborn's "Point of No Return."

The three-act comedy, based on the novel by John P. Marquand, and under the direction of Dr. Edwin L. Clark, received a shaky and somewhat laborious launching in the initial scenes; however, any early inadequacies were redeemed as the show moved into a quickly-paced and well-characterized second act, then settled down for a quiet and resolving final act.

Action of the play centered around Charles (played with feeling by Charles Croghan), a humble New England bank official faced with the possibility of an extremely desirable promotion.

Under the urging of his pushing wife, Nancy (Merle Reiff), and afraid that the position will be awarded to his driving fellow-employee Roger Blakesley (John Harding), he invites the bank president, Anthony Burton (Don Shuffstall) to his home for dinner to cement a more cordial relationship.

During the interim between the invitation and the dinner engagement Charles finds himself returning to his old home town on business, and engages, by means of a series of flash-backs, in the memories of past experiences and individuals who had shaped his life—primarily, his first love, Jessica Lovell (Vija Briedis), a small-town rich girl so emotionally tied to her snobbish father, Lawrence (Ted MacKechnie), that she chooses to remain with him rather than marry Charles; a snooping, talkative social anthropologist, Malcolm Bryant (Dave Selner), who constantly advises Charles not to "move out of his social class;" and Charles' father, John (Jim Painter), who commits suicide after failing to achieve the money and prestige he so hungrily sought.

Charles returns soberly to his home and the dinner engagement, at which he is led to believe by his employer's remarks that his competitor has won the position. He then arrives at the half-realization that this career was not the one he originally set out toward in life, that now he will be free to pursue what he really wants.

Just as he is about to inform his employer of this, the latter announces that it is actually Charles who is to be promoted to the coveted position, and he bewilderedly returns his thoughts to his satisfying, "conditioned" career.

Mastering the lengthy role of Charles Gray, Mr. Croghan evoked considerable sympathy as a man shaped by youthful humiliations and the American ideal of getting ahead. His performance was somewhat marred by expression which this reviewer found a little too inflexible, and movement a little too stiff, even for the banker he portrayed.

Miss Reiff, an actress of considerable talent, presented an almost technically perfect version of the socially-conscious yet loving Mrs. Gray, but at times her warmth seemed terribly forced, and her constant and haphazard eye movements distracted seriously from an otherwise outstanding portrayal.

A great deal should be said for these two performers, both new to the OU stage, as the task with which they were confronted—assuming the major burden of a less-than-excellent written play—is far from being a simple or easy one. And yet they carried it off admirably, in spite of the numerous unnerving technical errors of the show.

With such difficulties as these the evening's performance could easily have bogged down; however, the brilliant performances of such supporting players as Mr. MacKechnie, carrying the role of the ultra-sophisticated, stuffy Mr. Lovell to subtle perfection; Mr. Selner, creating a wonderfully aged, outspoken, but stangely lovable Malcolm Bryant; and Miss Briedis, presenting a truly moving picture of the tenderness and tearfulness of a torn love, succeeded in restoring the show to a high level of enjoyment.

Also meriting praise were the maturity and bearing he needed; Tom Hicks, as an overly-enthusiased traveling companion, and John Briedis, as Charles' enthusiastic and devilishly-clever young son.

Perhaps a question arises concerning the merit of the play itself, perhaps a question arises concerning the technical handling of the production, but all in all—a difficult task assumed by an inspired cast—an undertaking to be awarded well-deserved praise.

Dr. Schilz Heads Discussion Group on African Affairs

"Ethiopia is six times bigger than Nebraska, yet has only about 1,800 miles of roads. It had no roads until 1941 when Mussolini began a road building program."

The man speaking was Dr. Gordon B. Schilz, head of Omaha University's geography department since 1958.

Because of his background and research work in Africa, Dr. Schilz was one of two men chosen to handle the discussion period on Africa at the 46th annual meeting of the National Council for Geographic Education. The meeting was held last Friday in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dr. Schilz worked in Africa from 1953-57 as director of the Mapping and Geography Institute for the Ethiopian government.

In this position Dr. Schilz pro-

Semester Registration Set For All Returning Students

Pre-registration for freshmen day students will be Dec. 7-15, and upperclassmen may register Dec. 12-15, Registrar Alice Smith announced this week.

Regular registrations will be accepted from Feb. 2 from 1 to 4 p. m., and on Feb. 3 from 8 to 3 p. m.

All students pre-registering must pay a $10 fee and present a receipt to the class cards clerk in order to reserve class cards. This fee will be subtracted from the student's assessment when semester fees are assessed.

Detailed registration instructions are listed on page two of the second semester class schedule. Schedules and registration materials will be available Dec. 7 in the Registrar's Office, Rm 220, Administration Building.

Freshman counseling will be in Rm. 208, Adm., from 1 to 4 p. m., Feb. 2, and 8 to 3 p. m., Feb. 3.

Upperclassmen must report to their counselor's office. Each counselor will post the hours he will be available, and in all offices will be listed the semester schedule.

Students wishing to have class cards mailed to them may leave a stamped, addressed envelope with the Registrar's Office.

All fees are due and payable by 11 a. m. Feb. 1. If fees are not paid by the date, class cards will be returned to the file to be used by February registrants.

Step one in President Ball's move against traffic problems will be made next week.

Beginning Wednesday all left turns from Dodge Street into the campus will be banned.

Dr. Ball received the go-ahead for his plan at a meeting with city officials this week.

He said the turn arrow on the Sixtieth Street traffic signal would be removed and "no-left-turn" signs installed.

"In addition," Dr. Ball added, "a policeman will be on duty at the intersection during the rush hours."

He tabbed 6:30 to 8 a. m. and 5 to 6:30 p. m. as the busiest periods of OU traffic.

According to the driving survey taken two weeks ago, about 11 per cent of the nearly five thousand student-motorists have been making the left turns.

"They'll just have to get used to the idea of taking another route to the University," Dr. Ball pointed out.

Strnad to Receive Trophy for Paper

For the second consecutive year the Gateway has won the United Community Service award in the college division for its coverage of the drive.

One of the factors in the Gateway's selection was that it contained 150 column inches of printed material on the UCS contest during a five-week period.

Editor Linda Strnad will receive the trophy at a banquet which will be held Dec. 27.

The UCS contest and the banquet are sponsored by the Omaha Advertising Club.

Co-Ed Wins Award

Earlene Timm, OU freshman, was awarded a $400 scholarship at the National 4-H Congress Monday.

The scholarship was awarded by the Oliver Corporation. Miss Timm was Ak-Sar-Ben Dairy Queen in 1959 and State Holstein Club Girl in 1958. She has shown dairy cattle for eight years while in the "Purple Ribbon Dairy Club."

Jaynes to Discuss New Orleans Jazz

Dr. William Jaynes, speaking on the development of New Orleans jazz, will be the next faculty lecturer in the Project—OU series.

This second lecture for students will be held Dec. 5 in Room 312 of the Student Center.

Dr. Jaynes will use several recordings. He would like to show that there has been a growth in this music rather than remaining static as some people believe.

Bail to Sororities: Revise Your Rules

Panhellenic rules which have become "too numerous to enforce" are in need of a recodification, President Bail said this week.

At a meeting of the Panhellenic Council, sorority advisors and presidents, Dr. Bail called for a joint meeting "of all those concerned so that some of these things that have become so tedious may be ironed out."

He pointed out that many of the regulations have been adopted "solely to support other regulations which were adopted to support still other regulations."

"The sororities have got to sit down together and do some revising," Dr. Bail concluded.

"And I'm sure they will," he added.

2 Future Teachers Awarded Honors

To OU upperclassmen are considered "outstanding future teachers."

The College of Education students are Kathy Harris, a junior in elementary education, and Lee Perkins, a senior in secondary education. They received 25-dollar checks (Sullenger Memorial Fund) from the North Omaha Federated Women's Club which selected them for outstanding work as future teachers.

OU Prepares for Frosty Winter

In preparation for a winter potentially loaded with heavy snows, the members of the Building and Grounds Department are installing snow fences on campus.

Director of Building and Grounds Clarence Lefler says that the fences are placed strategically and will act as decoys to attract snow drifts. In this way, walk-ways will be kept reasonably free from deep snow and make an easier job of keeping the walks clear.

Heavy snow removal from the parking lot will be contracted to the Dugdale Construction Company, according to Mr. Lefler.

Psychology Professor Goes From Subs to Classrooms

By Paul "X" Derry

When the atomic submarine the Ethan Allen was launched earlier this month a man who for three years had attended the launching of other such submarines was absent.

Dr. J. W. Newton was busy in a classroom at Omaha University teaching Psychology.

For a man whose work had helped with the success of certain aspects of many atomic submarines, Dr. Newton perhaps felt a touch of melancholy at not being able to attend the Ethan Allen launching. Yet he has no regrets, he enjoys his work at OU.

As an Engineering Psychologist Dr. Newton worked for the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics Corp. in New London, Conn.

His job there was in designing controls, dials and similar apparatus that would make men's tasks easier. He was also concerned with the problems of training submarine crews and in this area helped design a scoring system in simulated polaris missile training.

Dr. Newton studied the problems of submarine crews, worked on basic and applied problems in training; did experimental research in the psychology of learning and the design of training devices.

Although working in what he calls "psychological design," Dr. Newton admits he received no formal training in engineering or design.

"I was interested in mathematics and had some background in it, and in engineering," he pointed out.

While working for General Dynamics Corp., Dr. Newton was also associated with the Bureau of Naval Personnel in specifying and selecting training requirements for men who would operate new weapons.

Dr. Newton had also worked for a short time as a consultant for Itek, Inc., a research firm developing teaching machines to instruct billing clerks at Spiegals, Inc.

He came to OU in September at the request of Dr. William Jaynes, head of the Psychology Department. They had been students together, obtained their doctorates in 1955 from Ohio State University.

Dr. Newton's appearance does not fit his experience. With his almost boyish appearance the 31-year-old assistant professor could easily be mistaken for a student at OU.

But his days as a student, as such, are behind him. He graduated from college in 1951, obtained his masters degree in 1952. Dr. Newton spent two years in the Army after receiving his doctorate.

While maintaining a busy schedule for 10 years Dr. Newton was still able to gain experience in teaching before coming to OU. While in college he did some student teaching, and found time from his work at General Dynamics Corp. to be a visiting lecturer at Connecticut College at New London.

If Dr. Newton is new at OU so is Experimental Psychology, new at least to most on the psychology staff. It hasn't been taught for many years.

Experimental Psychology is primarily a laboratory course, to teach students the use of laboratory equipment and methods," said Dr. Newton. "Its purpose is to teach the subject matter deals with sensation, perception and fundamental learning.

Each student in the course performs three experiments during the year, two of which are predetermined by Dr. Newton. The third is determined by the student.

The laboratory boasts many new devices used in the experiments by the students who either use each other or their friends as guinea pigs.

The work involved in the course has determined Dr. Newton to request that the credit hours be changed in the future from three to four.

Due to his background in Experimental Psychology, which is relatively new, having grown up during World War II, Dr. Newton hopes to eventually introduce a course in it at OU.

Once his course routine is set up, Dr. Newton plans to do research in learning and training in OU's experimental laboratory.

OU Debaters Win Over 20 Schools

OU debaters will face further competition next month fortified by their victory over 20 schools at the University of South Dakota tournament.

R. Hansen and Max Voigt were undefeated; while Dick Bakkerud and Al Henderson won three of four debates.

The Nov. 18-19 contest saw Rod Hansen capture a superior rating in radio speaking, and Dick Bakkerud was awarded superior in both extemporaneous speaking and oral interpretation.

Howard Hagglund and Bill Stillmock won three and lost one debate in the tournament held at Kearney the same week-end. Jim Gammon and John Cady split two and two. The OU team did not place in the tournament.

Bail, Ak-Sar-Ben Honor 16 Scholars

Sixteen Ak-Sar-Ben scholarship winners will be honored at a luncheon by President Milo Bail on Dec. 8 in the Student Center. Other guests will be the King and Queen of Ak-Sar-Ben, John Merriam and Lizbeth Cherniak, the OU Board of Regents and Ak-Sar-Ben officers.

The 16 scholarship winners are Judy Bacon, Patricia Bartlett, William Bremer, Eugene Brailley, Kathryn Chapek, David Cow-sky and Kay Crandall.

Others are Olivia Guerra, Donald Harm, Ronald Herman, Richard Inserra, James Kisicki, Jeanie Kocourek, James Pelowski, Lola Roberts and Elizabeth Vinski.

Indians Host Cross Country Championship

Omaha University was host to two important cross country meets in the last two weeks.

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics held its annual national championship on the Elmwood Park course last Saturday and the Central Intercollegiate Conference was here for its championships one week earlier.

CIC runners fell far off the pace at the fifth annual NAIA cross country meet.

Emporia State, the defending champion and this year's CIC winner, placed eighth.

Denny Dunning, the top Omaha U. runner, placed well down the line in 64th place.

The winner, Joe Thomas, is the first Negro and the first freshman to win the individual crown. His win paced Southern Illinois University to a record team total of 37 points and the team championship.

Thomas covered the four-mile course in 20 minutes and 39 seconds, also a record.

Emporia walked off with the honors at the CIC championship on Nov. 20.

Hornet harriers finished one-two-three for individual honors. Following Emporia were Pittsburg, Fort Hays and Omaha U.

Peru St. Will Be Opponent In Home Opener Saturday

The University of Omaha basketball team opens their home season tomorrow night hosting Peru State Teachers College in the Fieldhouse at 8 p. m. According to Coach Clarence (Sonny) Means, the team is progressing normally.

Three Lettermen

With only three returning lettermen, Bruce Hunter, Joe Neuberger and Gary Wentworth, Coach Means is faced predominantly with freshmen who are fighting for starting spots.

Coach Means feels the team is good over-all, but said before the season opener with Midland that competition is going to be tougher than last year, and with few exceptions every team to be played has a veteran club. He added that his team will commit errors in the beginning, but will overcome them with their spirit.

Three of the Players: Marvin Bratka, Roger Brown and Bill Derra have had Junior Varsity experience. This year's Junior Varsity is composed of a 16-man squad which will be divided between the Varsity and the Junior Varsity.

Attendance Needed

Coach Means hopes for good attendance at all home games. "A team always performs better when people are in the stands cheering them on," he said, "and many times this support is the difference between victory and defeat."

Probable starters for the Tribe in the opening contests are veterans Bruce Hunter, 6-2 sophomore forward; Gary Wentworth, 6-3 junior forward; Joe Neuberger, 6-0 sophomore guard.

Teaming with Neuberger at guard will probably be Marvin Bratka, 6-0 sophomore or Bill Derra, 5-11 sophomore.

One of the tallest men on the Indian squad 6-7 Roger Brown will man the pivot spot. Ed Woodward, 6-7 freshman, will also help bolster the pivot spot.

Jerry Kamphius 6-3 and Wendell Wiksell 6-0, both off South High's State champion squad of last year, plus Dave Hagglund 6-4 are expected to see considerable action.

Coed Swim Club Will Meet Dec. 4

Water volleyball, races, free swimming and recreational swimming will be some of the activities featured at the Water Sports Club meeting next Sunday, Dec. 4th from 7 to 8:30 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center.

There will be a meeting of football players on Tuesday, Dec. 6, at 3:30 p. m. in the Fieldhouse.

Purposes of the meeting will be to elect a captain for next season and make special awards to this season's players.
